BAUMAN-SCHAEFFER CONTEST PROVED MOST INTERESTING TO SPECTATORS.

GOOD BOUTS ENJOYED

Much Satisfaction Expressed As to Manner Events Were Staged by the Promoters.

One of the cleanest and best conducted boxing contests ever held in Janesville attracted the attention of the enthusiasts of the squared circle at the Myers theatre last evening for the initial show of the Flower City Athletic club's entertainment. All the events were staged on time; there was no delay, no waiting, and one followed the other in regular order. The ring was pitched on the stage, well to the front, giving an excellent view from all parts of the house and the contestants had been evenly matched and gave good account of themselves.

In the main bout Walter Bauman, the Milwaukee Dutchman, earned a shade over Willie Schaeffer of Chicago, in their bill of ten rounds, for he landed twice the blows of the Chicago boy and was the aggressor on all stages of the game. From the top of the gong he tore into the guard of Schaeffer, beating it down, and landing telling, clean and hard wallops in the infighting. When Schaeffer started the fans were confident of his winning as he possessed a world of speed and cleverness that enabled him to elude Bauman's savage rushes and plant quick, snappy uppercuts, that bothered the Milwaukee dutchman considerably in the ten rounds. Schaeffer was by far the cleverest, and cleanest boxer of the two, his footwork being effective, and his blocking in the body work, pretty to watch, and he was cool and collected at all times.

Bauman appeared the heavier and at the start unbuckled a series of feints and rushes that kept the crowd on an edge. Schaeffer presented a tackle and opened a battle, but Bauman's nose, that bled profusely, Schaeffer took things easy the first round, feeling out Bauman and his savage rushes. Schaeffer's cleverness earned him an even break in the second and third rounds, for when Bauman would smash down his guard with healthy wallops, the Chicago pug would counter with uppercuts that sent Bauman's head back with a jerk.

In the fourth, Schaeffer started to open up and set the pace for Bauman for the first minute. At long range he outboxed his opponent but when Bauman cornered him, the latter sent some wincing blows home. Schaeffer showed up better at the long range and this time he beat Schaeffer to his punches and when they exchanged blows, it was easily to be seen that Bauman's had more strength-killing steam behind them. This round was Bauman's by a wide margin.

In the fifth, Schaeffer started to ginger up and not work so coolly in the close work. The greater strength of the Cream City athlete told in the body punches and infighting. Every time Schaeffer would land a blow, Bauman would rush him and send hard smashes to the body, returning all compliments evenly. This round was even.

In the sixth, Bauman sent home two of the hardest wallops of the fight and by getting in close, had Schaeffer guessing to block those sledge-hammer smashes that kept driving into his stomach. Bauman was working badly from the old cut on his nose and his protruding beak was a target at which Schaeffer sent many of his short wallops. This round was Bauman's by a small shade.

Sport Snap Shots

SPORT SNAP SHOTS. It has been observed by some of the more sanguine that when Johnny Evers and George Stallings get together in a wordy wrangle sometime along in mid-summer next season it will be a treat for many. When the weather is good and hot and the going is heavy it will be surprising if George and Johnny don't have a nice little verbal run-in. Both of them being reputed to be warm tempered to the utmost.

According to all the dope, Sam Crawford is a more valuable man to the Milwaukee club than any well-known player in the league. When Ty Cobb, Cobb's yearly wage is more than twice that of Crawford's. Cobb is mentioned in the penny press about twenty times to Crawford's about once. Cobb batted .300 last season in Crawford's .216, and yet facts declare that Crawford is really the most valuable of the two. Crawford joined the team early in the training season last spring and played steadily throughout the season. His big asset was his ability to drive in runs. Though Cobb batted .74 points ahead of Sam, the latter drove in 76 runs on safe wallops, while Cobb's safes were only 30.

A total of 90 runs sent across the plate as a result of his activity at the bat. Cobb drove in 58 runs, some 24 less than Crawford. Of course it is argued that Cobb's ability as a drawing card is what earns his salary and his good work done for the box office is what endears him to his employers. And it must be admitted that as an individual player Ty has it all over Crawford. But for real value to the club and in helping along toward the pennant Crawford sizes up as much more valuable than the Georgia peach.

Hughie Jennings gets a nice, large, fragrant gardenia from us. Here at last is a man in the big show who frankly admits that heeds have a chance to cop. More of your sort, Hughie.

There has been some little said in the past number of weeks about what an awful wallop the big leagues are going to hand the Feds when they get good and ready. But as yet there hasn't been a noise that could be heard distinctly a few steps away. Have the big leagues really got something tucked away in their cuffs or were they only spoofing? The latter seems to be the cost popular bet.

Even Murphy's ushers and ground-keepers are leaving him. Charles Williams, secretary and business manager of the Chicago Feds, was formerly in Murphy's employ in the same connection. And Williams declares that he is daily besieged with applications for jobs by former gate-keepers, ushers and other employees of the Cubs.

Frank Linn of Chicago, been trained properly, Joe Perente of Madison, would have received the Madison Italian under cover by the third round. Gordon Russell refused to make weight, and Linn was named to fight Perente with only three days to get down to 145 pounds. Round match was fast in spots and clean punches were exchanged by both pugs. Linn won his bout with the steady use of a short uppercut, that had Perente groggy for several rounds. Several times he came near landing that deep-producing smash, but Perente stayed off a bad defeat by hanging on and clinching. The Madison glove-wielder was good on distance for he rarely swung wild and landed many telling blows during the early rounds. His opponent was a star at covering up and blocking, for although Perente whaled away like a windmill, very few of the blows found their mark. The bout started slowly and it was not until they were warned several times that Linn cut loose and started pushing his weaker rival around the padded ropes.

The first was even, both men stalling. Perente showed up well in the second and won a margin, although Linn backed him against the ropes, and knocked him some good body punches. Picking out Perente's head, Linn started a bombardment, that soon sent Perente to his corner groggy with defeat showing on his face. By the fifth Perente was working his hardest to keep Linn's punches away from his bleeding mouth. The Chicago man showed unusual ability at covering up after missing an attack which left Perente without an opening. In the sixth both men went at it hammer and tongs, and Perente earned an even break by some clever footwork escaping by some fatal uppercuts and boxing Linn even from a distance.

TOSSERS AT MONROE TONIGHT FOR GAME

Curtis and His Warriors Feel They Have Recuperated, and Assert Victory is Only Hope.

Curtis and his squad, composed of Captain Hemming, Atwood, Stewart, Han, Stickney and Barnes are in Monroe, where they will battle with the high school five at 8 o'clock in the Armory gymnasium. Monroe's strength is uncertain to the Janesville team, but it is generally considered that they are not as fast as Elkhorn or Edgerton, for the latter decisively trimmed them earlier in the year.

Monroe class Janesville as being a fast aggregation of tossers. Their account of the game tonight is as follows:

"The Monroe highs will meet the Janesville highs in the armory Friday night. Without question the visitors are the rasiest bunch of high school ball tossers who will come here this season, as three of last year's team which won the state tournament at Appleton are members of the quintet this year.

"Janesville is again in the race for the state title and is the most promising contender for the pennant at present. Monroe will try to give the visitors a run for their money.

"This will be a great game. Don't miss this chance to see one of the best high school teams in the state."

Madison at Racine.

The Madison high school five are to play at Racine tonight against the high school gymnasium. The Episcopalians will meet the Methodists in the opening encounter, while the Baptist and Congregational teams will attend a windup for the evening. It is expected that a large crowd will attend the matches tonight, as enthusiasm since last week has risen to a very high degree.

Paul Richards, captain of the Methodist five, is confident of trimming the Trinity boys and holding a clear claim on first place. The Congregational team will have to work their hardest in order to capture a win from the Baptists, who will be represented by a fighting team tonight. The game is free to the public.

EBBETS WILL FIGHT BROOKLYN FEDERALS

Charlie Ebbets, who has been making a name for himself in the boxing ring, will fight the Brooklyn Federals tonight.

Frank L. Prescott of the state boxing commission was present at the bouts, and after expressing satisfaction as to the way the bouts were staged, "I have never been to a match where the crowd was as orderly as last night and am sure that the Athletic club of this city has obtained a good start," remarked Prescott just after the final bout.

There was the usual number of fighters and near-fighters to be introduced to the crowd last night. Challenges were given by "Winky" Cox of the Corbett-Sharkey struggle; Ed Carpenter, a Burlington heavyweight; Red Oliver and Ryan hurried defies in a reckless manner. No time was wasted giving the fans their publicity as the bouts were run off as fast as the men could get into action.

Sharkey caused a ripple of laughter to go around the fans when he would step out of the way, walk around Corbett while he was crowded down and then make a face at him. Both pugs resorted to a great deal of grandstand conversation during their eight rounds.

JUNIOR BASKETBALL LEAGUE ORGANIZED

Physical Directors Yordy of Y. M. C. A. Has Four Teams Ready for Play Which Starts Saturday.

Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock the Junior basketball league, a new organization composed of four teams, recently formulated at the Y. M. C. A. will commence the playing of games, under the direction of Physical Director Frank Yordy.

CHAUTAUQUA DIPLOMACY.

William Jennings Bryan, President Wilson's secretary of state, is coming in for a lot of criticism these days over his so-called "Chautauqua Diplomacy." It has been a rare chance for William Jennings to put into actual practice a lot of the theories he has advocated for years and he is doing his task most nobly. The Milwaukee Free Press comments on his particular brand of diplomacy as follows:

"A shrieking evidence of the school-boy fashion in which the diplomatic negotiations of this country are being conducted by Secretary Bryan was brought out the other day by the foreign relations committee of the senate.

"The secretary was dilating with gusto on the new arbitration treaty which he has negotiated with Denmark, when he was asked to explain what effect such a treaty would have upon the possible purpose of Denmark to sell her West Indian islands to some other foreign power—say Germany.

"The secretary of state of the United States of America blushed and hemmed and then meekly admitted that he had altogether overlooked the fact that Denmark owned islands so near the Panama canal.

"The dispatch does not state whether the committee took the cue and then there made a test of Mr Bryan's knowledge of American geography. If they did not, they failed of a national duty.

"Can Mr. Bryan name and number the Danish islands? Does he know in which of the Antilles they are located? Can he tell what part they form of the Virgin islands? Can he give the continental name of Santa Cruz?

"We doubt it. The chances are that he didn't know. Denmark had any possessions on this continent until he was told so by the senate committee.

"Yet this is the 'statesman' who is at the head of our state department at a time when the most difficult and delicate foreign policies are on the line—the most far-reaching treaties without so much as knowing their bearings upon the face of this continent.

"What a spectacle for the world. What a source of gloom to the governments of Europe. What a blessing for the sensibilities of the nation that the 'bulls' and 'breaks' of our national spokesman are so safely enshrouded in the archives of the state department.

"It is clear now why Mr. Bryan has been peopling the legislatures with inexperienced second-raters. If he holds diplomacy so cheap and easy as to consider himself equal to the duties of a secretary of state, he is only consistent when he considers other self-worn Democrats politicians fully competent to hold down minor diplomatic posts.

"Chautauqua diplomacy is one thing, but Chautauqua diplomacy is another—a mighty expensive luxury for a great nation."

CHANGING THE TUNE.

The Wall Street Journal comments on the changing of the tune in discussing the famous little street down in New York, called Wall and says: "One of those writers conspicuous in the past in magazine muckraking, when that commodity was salable, has written an article for a widely circulated weekly in which he has given Wall Street a clean bill of health, principally on account of Mr. Wilson. His former Wall Street was an image of straw; set up to be knocked down again. His new one is as little like the real thing. Wall Street cared little enough for his blame. It might be pardoned for resenting his praise.

"His new description of Wall Street, 'that narrow winding historic way' and 'a street that is not even geometrically straight,' will do little to enlighten the public mind. The fact that a straight line can be drawn from the door of Trinity Church to the East river for the entire length of the street, without touching the sidewalk, gives about the measure of his powers of vision. This authority quotes a number of unnamed personages in Wall Street to prove his point, if he has one. But any analysis of his own statements shows that the new things he has learned, like the old ones he has discarded, are chiefly not so.

There is one test of knowledge of the stock exchange which is unfailing. If a writer does not know the difference between what he gibberly calls 'wash sales' (fictitious transactions) and 'matched orders,' he does not know the elements of the business. It is impossible to argue with him without first teaching him his own case. Here is an example: 'Today you find the stock exchange reforming from within; with wash sales and manipulation prohibited.' 'There has never been a time when wash sales were not prohibited, or when the rule against them was not strictly enforced. It is to the interest of every member to prevent fictitious transactions. The hand of every man would be against any two members recording a bargain involving no transfer of stock, and this is why the wash sale, long before the era of reform in the stock exchange, existed only in the public imagination.

"Matched orders, where the brokers are at least executing a bona fide sale or purchase, come from outside the stock exchange. They are only partly under the control of the exchange committee. So far as they represent manipulation, they are an occasional part of any open market in any commodity the world over, from green peas to government bonds.

"Wall street is going through the secondary phase of a vital development. During that process it may well pray to be saved from its friends."

HAVING HARD WORK.

The Beloit Daily News is having hard work trying to attach the name "Stalwart" to the mass convention of taxpayers that will assemble at the court house in Janesville, Saturday. For some reason or other the News has the idea that anything in the line of protest against conditions which have become almost unbearable, but which have the brand of La Polletteism must emanate from the old line stalwart organization that died a natural death years ago. The gathering Saturday is called by men who are in much in earnest and is strictly non-partisan in its scope. Republicans, democrats, progressives, prohibitionists, conservatives all have a common cause for action and are to meet to discuss what course they shall take. It will take more than the Daily News to make it a stalwart gathering.

Now that Janesville is to have a fair all of its own everyone should turn in and help make it a success. The Park Association directors have accomplished almost an impossibility but they need more assistance and they should have it.

This is the time to make your selection for member of the city commission, not after election day. Pick the best man available and you will have done your duty as a citizen and taxpayer.

Perhaps that ground hog was right after all. You never can tell, but the weather man has given at least one good sample of balmy spring winds and perhaps more are to follow.

That judgeship battle promises to be interesting to say the least. The various candidates are going after the office tooth and nail.

On the Spur of the Moment

Saving Money.

Our dads all tell us we should save our money all the while. For every penny we save we make in time a fine large pile. But it takes quite a lot more now for folks to keep alive. Where they paid 15 cents for steak, we must pay forty-five.

They saved their money, without doubt, but then it was no trick. No food trust then, were passing out to them the golden brick. At 15 cents a dozen, eggs were quite within their reach. But when we now buy one or two, they cost us five cents each.

They used to go and grab a hen at 13 cents a pound. But 25 cents nowadays is how the chickens sound. They used to get their butter by the crock, ten pounds or so. But now it strains us to acquire one pound of oleo.

The olden days are past and gone, our fathers used know. When they all had fat bank accounts and sat and watched them grow. They saved their money, yea, they did, and that we must allow. We'd like to have them tell us just how much they're saving NOW.

It's a Mortal Cinch.

That the fellow who calls you up at 2 a. m. on the telephone by mistake is going to call you again. He is going to say: 'What? Ain't this six-eleven-sixty-six? Well, why in blazes ain't it?

That the pie that comes home from the grocery is going to be a crusted top and part of the edge peeled off. That the telephone is going to be busy for half an hour when you want to get your wife in a hurry.

That a fellow is going to marry the girl before you get to the end of the book. That the good things of the quick lunch bill of fare are going to be gone before you get there.

That your automobile is going to balk just as soon as you pick up someone to whom you have been praising your car.

That the lady with the large hat will get peevish at you when she runs into you and twists it out of shape.

Smile.

"Smile," says the optimist, "smile all the day. All your troubles will fade away. To solve all problems, of any style, just smile and you'll do it, smile, smile, smile."

I owed a tailor for my last year's suit. He sent many bills; his grouch was a beauty. I went to my tailor with a smile on my face. Then he sued me in court and he won his case.

The landlord came round and he wanted his rent. He came without warning; I hadn't a cent. I thought of the optimist, tried the smile game. But he moved me right out in the street just the same.

The optimist sure is a well-meaning fellow. His words they are soft and his manner is mellow. But his smile stung is punk; I am right here to shout. That he doesn't know what he is talking about.

According to Uncle Abner. After all is said and done, the bunk stories seem to be getting along pretty well in this world. Don't despise the little ones. Four deuces have accomplished a great deal, from time to time.

Nothing seems to be growing faster than the automobile industry. The 1915 models are out of style before a fellow can wear out his 1912 model. When a fellow goes job hunting with a grease spot on his vest it knocks $10 a week off his salary. Lookin' like famous men is one popular way to get noticed, but posterity is going to have a hard time trying to resemble Wilson.

General Jacob S. Coxey.

General Jacob S. Coxey is planning another "ocular demonstration" like his famous march of the unemployed in 1894. He is doing it in furtherance of a plan "to put an end to panics forever."

"By May 1," says Coxey, "I hope to marshal a million migratory workers in Washington. Our object will be the same as that of twenty years ago, to persuade the government to issue currency secured by the non-interest bearing debt of the states and get the states to spend it in paving every rural road in America."

The Chicago Tribune's "Best Story" of the 12th. "The Weakener's Strength" is shown tonight. But we would wager that "On the Lazy Line" and "The Measure of a Man" will please you even more.

The widow Black sits weeping; above the sound of the gushing tears we hear the tramp tramp of large, gloomy feet approaching and Desmond Haight, the villain, comes upon the scene. He is going to enclose the mortgage at six o'clock. What does the poor widow do? She telegraphs, collect, to her rich son George. George rushes to the train, to rescue his mother in distress. But Alas! the only train is the Lazy Line! What does he do if you want the best laugh you have had in a long time, see George's trip "On the Lazy Line" tonight.

Tomorrow's program includes three especially good subjects: "Rorke's Drift," a two-part Edison with Mabel Trunnelle, the Tribune's "Best Story" of the 13th is one. The others are "Sonny" in "Scandal of a Mother," a Vitagraph with Bob Connelly, Tefft Johnson and Dorothy Kelly, and "Courting Betty's Beau," an Edison with Gladys Hulette. These two are comedies.

Religion the Supreme Thing in Life

By REV. J. H. HALSTON

Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Meady Bible Institute, Chicago

For the thorough Bible student there must be interpreted in connection with certain ideas suggested by the term "kingdom of God." But this text can be taken by itself as suggestive of thought, which, while not confined to the general subject under consideration, is most practical and timely.

This text suggests religion, the religion of him who spoke the words, and we desire to insist that this religion should be the supreme thing in life, its lack being promptly acknowledged.

The apostle James does not give a definition of religion when he says "pure religion and undefiled before God and the father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Two elements of religion only here appear, that which is broadly called charity, which with many is nothing more than altruism, and separation from the world, which has been designated recently as stoicism. In religion there is something that is positive, it must go beyond kind deeds to the needy, and retirement from the world. A great theologian defines religion as the sum of the relations which man sustains to God, and comprises the truths, the experiences, the actions and institutions which correspond to, or grow out of those relations.

As thus defined religion must be the supreme thing in life. This life may be of the community, for no community realizes the acme of social happiness unless it is in a corporate way respectful to the elements of religion just presented; but we desire to place the emphasis on the individual life. We would not do this because we ignore community life, but because reaching the individual lives that make the community we reach the community in a way that is infinitely more satisfactory than by reaching it in its corporate capacity. We would not confuse any individual by calling his attention to religion as supreme in the community, but as supreme in himself.

The first reason for this is that God commands it as in the text announced, as creator, preserver, daily benefactor and guarantor of blessings on man, the value of which cannot be measured. This right of God to command is denied by many, and not even a word of thanksgiving for the daily blessings of life, nor a prayer for their continuance is heard, except from very few.

The universal belief in the immortality of the soul of man puts emphasis on the value of the permanent. Religion directly affects the permanent. It emphasizes that which is beyond this life, yet one of the strange things of human experience is that multitudes come to the end of life as if there was nothing beyond. The old prophet's "prepare to meet thy God" is not a mere matter of historical interest, it should ring in the ears of every living man and woman. After death there is judgment appointed of God, and the judge has likewise been appointed. But what are the issues of judgment? In short, heaven and hell. Yet how cynically these great facts are thought of and spoken about, but religion provides for the winning of the one, and escaping the other. If heaven and hell are myths, there must be a revision not only of the teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles, but of the moral philosophy of all the ages. If these great facts of the beyond were a more permanent element in the evangel of the day, that evangel would be far more effective.

Another reason why religion should be supreme is that the worry of men and women over the things of small importance would disappear. In close connection with this text Jesus spoke of the anxious care for food and clothing. That is what is eating out the life of multitudes today, something entirely unnecessary. If religion is made supreme, food, clothing, housing and the like, will be added by God. God sees to it that those who obey his command, and recognize the purpose of their being are provided for, for as Father he knows that men have need of all these things, and yet supplying them he never puts a premium on laziness or unthrift.

The word first as used here may be taken first as referring to interest or concern. At this point even a little thought as to what religion can do for man would increase this concern. But the word may mean first in time, and the text might be paraphrased in this way, become religious by taking the initial step of believing in Jesus Christ, and do it without a moment's delay.

Lesson IX.
TRUSTING IN RICHES AND TRUSTING IN GOD.
THE STORY.

"Man!" Repressive, almost rough! It is the first and last time Jesus ever used this style of address. His disquieting mind has not been following him at all. While the Master was teaching about the kingdom of heaven he was obsessed with some piece of ground his brother had kept him out of. The highest use he can make of Jesus is to avail himself of his growing power to extort some thing additional from the executor of his father's estate. But we sense, since it led Jesus to define one of his prime working principles and also to utter a parable cautionary and illuminative for every age until the end of time, Jesus' work, Church and State. As a minister of religion he will invade the province of the courts, or assume the role of a civil officer. But though he refused the man's blunt and unreasoning request, he proceeded to utter a truth, which, if he had accepted, would have enriched him as no new partition of the estate could possibly read like a biography. The parable owner is the very incarnation of expediency. Here is displayed the self-sufficiency, "My fruits," in all its offensiveness. "A long space in which there shall be repose, eating, drinking, and sleep, is counted upon. There is death hold, first mortgage, and just about to foreclose. Like claps of thunder in clear sky comes voice of God, 'Thou fool! This night is thy life required of thee!' All shrivels into nothingness at that sound!" It is as though the parable Jesus had been making a coat for his foolish brother. Now he fits it to his back in his concluding words, "So is wealth that is so bent upon acquiring when the riches of the spirit in which God delights are being despised."

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.
The faithfulness of the man's request might have been forgiven if he had asked Jesus to merely arbitrate. But in his mind the question was not admit or review. He wants Jesus to order his brother to divide. He reduces the teacher of religion to the grade of an officer of the court. The psychologist would explain the unseemly request on the principle of suggestion. Jesus had just referred to courts and affirmed the right words to speak on occasion there. The man felt he could put his case in Jesus' hands with every probability that it would be won.

The parable is a paraphrase of the story of Nabai, who by name means "Fool," or it may easily have been a transcript from current life. The story of Balaam, Gehazi, Judas, and Ananias, each is a red lantern on the track of those who are bent on being rich at any hazard. Not what one has, but what one is—that is the true measure of life.

There is an animal life for the enjoyment of which abundance does minister. There is a soul-life which is neither made nor marred by abundance. It has been aptly said that the one if the life we live (bios), the other the life by which we live (zoe). If the rich man had had a grain of benevolence he would not have "dialogued with himself." As St. Ambrose says, "Bosom of needy, house of widow, mouth of orphan, these could have been his barns."

He thought himself sapient. God pronounced him a fool. If this teaching is designed for the rich exclusively then it is of limited application. Paul is that poor may have their hearts as firmly set upon that which they do not possess as the millionaire's heart is set upon the contents of his safety deposit box. This is no mere caution to the rich. It is a check to a universal tendency. There is a current Epicureanism which asserts that life does not consist in abundance of things possessed.

TWELVE GREAT VERSES. (III)
THE LOVE VERSE.
(Consolation Meeting)

The old notion, borrowed from Roman imperialism of God on a throne at a great remove and inaccessible, is replaced in current thought by the latest formulated doctrine, the immanence of God: God in us. Love makes possible a reciprocal indwelling. We are in God. God in us.

ORFORDVILLE
Orfordville, Wis. Feb. 25.—Theodore Olson of Broadhead was in the village on Thursday and transacted business at the county court in Janesville on Thursday.

Delegates were elected to the County Camp which meets in Beloit a few weeks hence.

Byron Grenwald of Orfordville and Miss Lydia Bernstine of Broadhead were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bernstine on Thursday afternoon. The wedding was a private one, only the immediate family of the bride being present. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the Evangelistic German church, of which the bride is an active member. Mr. and Mrs. Grenwald will make their residence in Orfordville. The groom being engaged in farming.

Annual meeting Monday, March 2, p. m., town hall. O. J. Palmier, president; G. H. Hildner, vice-president; E. G. Williams, secretary; William Bussey, manager.

Horace Stillman was a business caller in Madison Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Babcock and little son, from the north, are guests of Charles Babcock. Leo and Clarence Olstad were in Utica Saturday and Sunday. Paul and Charles Star were in Stouten on business Friday. Miss Grace Babcock is very sick. Roy Hayes spent Wednesday and Thursday in Madison. Little Bernard Kelly is sick with pneumonia. Dr. W. W. Coon is caring for him. Mrs. Mary Palmer, who has been sick, is better at the present writing. Paul Stark spent Wednesday evening at Otto Ruck's. Mr. and Mrs. George Babcock are visiting friends at Rock River a few days.

SIX THOUSAND WASHINGTON MONUMENTS

The Washington Monument will long remain as the world's most typical memorial to a national hero. Although the projected Lincoln Memorial will cost much more, it probably will not so well portray the character of the man—a nation's devotion to whose memory it commemorates. The Washington Monument is lofty, in keeping with the character of the Father of His Country. It is simple, in keeping with the manner of his life; it is magnificent, in keeping with his services to his country. The work of building the Panama Canal represents the handling of enough material to build nearly six thousand shafts of solid construction, duplicating the proportions of the Washington Monument. It would make a row of shafts, with base touching base, some ten miles longer than the canal itself. When Frederick J. Haskin came to tell the story of the building of the canal, the only story, by the way, that bears the O. K. of Chief Engineer Goethals, he sought to reduce things to terms comprehensible by the layman. And with just such illustrations as this one he turns technicalities into every day terms and conveys to the reader the best picture extant of the work of building the canal. Our readers deserve the best information there is on the canal, and that is why The Janesville Gazette is offering the Haskin book at cost of printing and distribution. Save your coupons.

What weapon?
DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it "Hamburger Brust Thee" at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teaspoon full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold's back. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

We Promise You Relief from All Stomach Troubles—Or Your Money Back

We honestly believe we have the best remedy in the world for indigestion and dyspepsia. We urge you to try it at our risk. If it doesn't relieve you—as we feel sure it will—we'll give back your money without a word. You know us—your family druggist. You know we wouldn't dare recommend anything we didn't know about, nor dare to break a promise. Therefore, when we recommend any remedy it is because we believe it to be better than any other to relieve the ailment for which it is made, and when we prove our faith in it and our sincerity toward you by promising to give back your money if it doesn't relieve you and in every way satisfy you, you have no possible excuse for doubt or hesitation.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets

are, we honestly believe, the best remedy made for indigestion, dyspepsia and all other Stomach ills

We Know They're Good

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, in addition to other ingredients, contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two great digestive aids used by the entire medical profession. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check the heartburn and distress, stimulate a healthy secretion of the gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food and help to quickly convert it into rich red blood, and thereby into flesh, bone and muscle. They relieve stomach distress promptly, and, used regularly for a short time, tend to restore the stomach to a comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They aid greatly to promote regular bowel action.

Delays Are Dangerous

Don't neglect indigestion, for it frequently leads to all sorts of ills and complications. The pain and discomfort is not the most unfortunate part. The fact that when the stomach is not acting right, the material needed to repair the wastes that are constantly taking place in the body is not being given to the blood either in the proper condition or fast enough is far more serious. Nothing will cause more trouble than an unhealthy stomach. The blues, debility, lack of strength and energy, constipation, biliousness, headaches and scores of other serious ailments result from the failure of the stomach to properly do its work.

You Risk No Money

Our willingness to have you use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets entirely at our risk proves our faith in them. We always sell them this way, and it is because we know that they have greatly benefited scores of sufferers to whom we have sold them. There's no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. You needn't sign anything. Your word is enough for us. We know that when they help you you will consider it money well spent even if they had cost you ten times as much. If they don't help you, the money you paid for them is yours, and we want you to have it.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores—the World's Greatest Drug Stores. In convenient boxes—three sizes: 25c, 50c, $1.00

DECLARES ALFALFA SHOULD BE RAISED BY EVERY FARMER

Crop Should Be Started on Carefully Picked Ground of Clay Loam, Protected From Overflow.

(By Allen B. West.)

In preceding papers the writer has attempted to show something of the value of alfalfa to Rock county farmers. That its value is not appreciated is shown by the small acreage of this crop in the county, as compared with adjoining counties. Should gold be discovered in the county in paying quantities, each farmer would no doubt secure thorough analysis of his soil, hoping he might find "pay dirt" as they used to say in the old days in California. The writer is convinced that if each Rock county farmer had the acreage of this wonderful crop that is its due in their own county, the farmers of the county are of prosperity such as mines could not bring. The farmers have only to put a reasonable amount of their land into alfalfa to raise gold and pay off their mortgages.

And this for the following reasons: First, Because alfalfa supplies all kinds of stock with food rich in protein and so cuts down the farmer's bills for grain. Second, Because it is a perennial plant that produces a larger yield than any other hay crop. Third, Because its roots are covered with nodules containing bacteria that have the power of laying hold of nitrogen of the air and converting it into plant food, thus leaving the land in better condition than before it was sown. Fourth, Because on account of its root growth it is able to withstand drought. Fifth, Because land that has grown alfalfa will grow other crops better than before. Sixth, Because the manure from animals fed with alfalfa will give better results as a fertilizer than that from animals fed any other kind of hay.

Surely then it is worth while to spend some time learning how to grow this great crop. The first thing to be considered is the location of the ground on which the alfalfa is to be grown. Unless a farm has grown alfalfa it is not wise to begin with a large piece. It is better to start with from one to five acres. This will enable one to learn the needs of the plant and what his land requires to satisfy these needs. As land varies, no rule can be given that will cover all cases. An ideal location would be a well drained piece of ground of rich clay loam on top of gravel or limestone, with a northern slope. It will, however, grow on all types of soil, so one should not hesitate to make the trial if he has not the ideal location. Some one has truthfully said that the growing of alfalfa is not so much a question of the soil as the kind of man behind the soil.

The location of the trial field, however, is more important than the location of subsequent fields, for after alfalfa has become thoroughly established upon a farm, it will grow under conditions less favorable than at first. Water must not stand upon the field at any time during the year and land having the water line within two or three feet of the surface should be avoided.

Limestone soils or soils containing a good supply of carbonate of lime are the best for alfalfa. Alfalfa will not grow successfully on sour soil. It is wisest then to test all soil before trying alfalfa. This may easily be done in the following manner. Obtain blue litmus paper from the drug list and taking some moist soil from a few inches below the surface of the ground press it firmly over a strip of the litmus paper. Leave it for ten or fifteen minutes before removing. If on removing the color of the paper has changed to pink or red, it is proof that the soil is acid.

Care must be taken in handling the litmus paper as perspiration from the hands may change the color. When there is no acid in the soil, the experiment is a very simple one; but if any of my readers would like to have their soil tested for them and will send a sample to the writer at Janesville, he will be glad to test it for them. Sheep sorrel and horse tail rush grow on the land. It is a pretty good indication of the acidity of the soil. It is safest, however, to make the test with the blue litmus paper. It is folly to waste time and seed trying to grow alfalfa on acid soil. The bacteria that grows in the nodules upon the roots of the plant can not live in acid soils. The acidity of the soil may be corrected by the use of dry lime or pulverized raw limestone, which should be scattered over the field at the rate of one to four tons per acre. Those living in the vicinity of the sugar beet factory may usually obtain refuse lime for the hauling.

Many farms are crushing lime rock for use on acid soils and there are many sources from which the farmer may obtain this material. The university of Wisconsin bulletin No. 239, on Soil Acidity and Liming, contains helpful information along this line and Illinois Farmers' Institute bulletin No. 18 gives directions for the construction of a spreader which any farmer can have made and which it claims has given better satisfaction in the spreading of limestone and rock phosphate than any other machine on the market.

As alfalfa properly started will continue to be a profitable crop with re-seeding for a term of years, it pays to make careful preparation of the ground before putting it in. Land that has been in young sod the previous year and then put into potatoes, corn or peas, or some root crop where clean culturing was practiced, is most suitable. This should be plowed in the fall seven or eight inches deep. As soon as the ground can be worked in the spring and once a week thereafter until about June first, it should be gone over with a disk followed with a fine toothed harrow. The alfalfa seed may then be sown without any nurse crop, using twenty pounds of seed to the acre. Should the land be plowed in the spring a portion of July before the seed is sown. If sown as early as June first one cutting may probably be secured that same season, but it should not be cut after September fifth. The seed can be sown with a hand seeder or a grass seeder attachment and when sown a slight toothed harrow should be used after seeding to cover lightly. It should not be sown too deep on clay soils, less than an inch being sufficient for it two deep the tiny plants will not be able to push their way to the surface. If the land is plowed in the spring it should immediately be dragged to prevent drying out and the plow or roller should be run over the land both before and after seeding. Experience proves that alfalfa grows better without a nurse crop than with one, though when alfalfa was first grown a nurse crop was supposed to be beneficial. However, if a nurse crop is desired the season the alfalfa is seeded, it may be sown with a nurse crop, provided sufficient care is taken in the preparation of the seed bed. The writer used nurse crop of barley with his alfalfa with good results, the grain being cut for hay before maturing. Barley is recommended as the best grain for a nurse crop though oats and spring wheat may be used. The grain should be sown sparingly, using only about half the quantity of seed as when sown alone. If a nurse crop is used the time of sowing the alfalfa may be governed by the best time for the grain. The seeding can be done with one operation, provided a drill or seeder is used with a grass seed attachment.

Care must be taken to sow in such a way that the seed will not be covered too deeply. When the nurse crop is used the alfalfa plants should be watched carefully especially if the season is dry and if they appear to be getting yellow, the nurse crop should be cut, leaving the alfalfa in possession of the ground. If alfalfa continues to thrive the grain may be allowed to ripen. Without a nurse crop alfalfa may be sown as late as August and if the land is very weedy it is advisable to summer fallow and then sow in August. Or the land may be used for an early crop of peas or potatoes and then put into condition for alfalfa, which may be sown the same season if the land is not too weedy. If very weedy it is best to continue cultivation during summer and fall and sow early in the following spring. These in the main are the directions given in Bulletin No. 239 of the Wisconsin Experiment Station and are in accordance with the experiences of growers in the county. The Illinois Bulletin No. 18 gives the following:

In making a seed bed for alfalfa we attach considerable importance to disk and harrowing the land before plowing, because a seed bed is then prepared and turned over. With such treatment a six inch bed will be secured, white with a single plowing the bottom soil will be cloudy, loose, filled with trash, and not connected with the soil below the furrow. A firm connection with the subsoil is preferable as this permits the capillary rise of water, a mellow covering aerates the soil, takes up the heat, permits the rapid germination, and enables the little thread-like roots of the plant to push through the fine soil, gather moisture and plant food, and thus promote rapid growth of the plant itself.

Alfalfa is a deep feeder; it is classed as a soil restorer, and while it gathers nitrogen from the air, it feeds heavily on the phosphorous and potassium in the soil. Plant food applied to land that is to be seeded to alfalfa will give quick returns and profit to the grower. Worn and thin soils should first be improved physically by incorporating manure in the soil or by playing under a heavy crop of some organic matter and left to decay in the land before seeding to alfalfa.

A careful preparation before seeding is sure to bring results in increased yield. If the ground is also properly inoculated and good seed selected, these subjects will be treated at length in subsequent articles.

Amusements

THE APOLLO THEATRE.

With their natty uniforms the six girls in the U. S. Military Maids played their way into popular favor last night at the Apollo theatre. There is not a poor musician in the sextette, every one being a talented player of her particular instrument. They play a program of varied popular musical airs and march through the house to the music of "Come on Nancy, put your best dress on."

Mrs. Moore with her Irish humor started a laugh right at the start. She dresses the part and with her songs and jokes makes a bunch of fun.

Gram, Yorke and Fay combine to make the best trio that has been seen at the Apollo for some time. They have a refined and clean act and are charming people. They sing, they dance with beautiful grace, introducing the tango.

The bill is one that is well worth seeing.

GIRL ART STUDENT SKETCHES SUSPECTS

Miss Roma Gleason.

Miss Roma Gleason, student at the Chicago Art Institute, is sketching "suspects" as they appear before the election commissioners in answer to "suspect" notices as a result of the recent registration. They will be used by suffrage leaders in challenging voters at the coming municipal election.

A Hint to Managers.
Miss Updette at last found an unengaged afternoon and went to the ball game. She entered the grand stand with her escort in a leisurely way and, after looking about her, glanced at the players at practice. "Why, what dreadful creatures!" she exclaimed. "They are wearing exactly the same cut of uniform as last year when I was here."

His Best Order.
It had been a dull season, and the two young travelling salesmen were comparing notes. "I had just five good orders in the last month," said one. "You beat me, anyway," said his friend. "I got only three orders, and the third one was from the firm telling me to come home."—Youth's Companion.

Lacking in Wisdom.
The person who has every reason to but doesn't isn't much of a philosopher.

Anger.
Of all passions, there is none so extravagant and outrageous as that of anger; other passions solicit and mislead us, but this runs away with us by force, and hurries us as well to our own as to another's ruin; it falls many times upon the wrong person, and discharges itself upon the innocent instead of the guilty, and makes the most trivial offenses to be capital, and punishes an inconsiderate word perhaps with fetters, infamy or death.

Go Out and Seek Fortune.
The man who waits for something to turn up is usually fast asleep when it does come along.

The Immortal Things.
The great things of my life—love, faith, the intimation of beauty, the things most savoring of immortality—are the things most general, the things most shared, and least distinctively me.—H. G. Wells.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTE CAMERON

WHAT WE DON'T KNOW.

IT SEEMS so hypocritical to me. She sure really grieve for him, so why should she pretend to. She surely knows that we know what a relief it must be to her.

"She" is a widow who has recently lost her husband. We know that in his lifetime he drank and gambled to excess; that the marriage was a failure; that he is gone and that she is left a widow. And now that he is gone, she is left a widow. We did not consider that she should. Why should we? We quoted said, we felt it ought to be a relief.

In one way it probably was. And yet what could we really know about the matter. We had seen the man from one angle. We knew his vices; they had been so well advertised by his own indiscretions, that when we thought of him we thought, simultaneously of "confirmed drunkard and gambler."

I wonder now if there was not something more to him than his vices. Something sweeter, kinder, whole-somer, that his widow alone ever saw, rare flashes that revealed not perhaps, the man he was, but the man he might have been. Some of these winning qualities, that even the worst of us have; such virtues as those that endear the scapegrace son to the mother who alone refuses to wholly condemn.

Is it not true that we are apt to pick out a vice here and a virtue there, string them together and say, "there stands the man?" Are we not inclined to judge a man as a part—the part we know, rather than as a whole, formed of many virtues, many graces and even many vices, most of them beyond our ken?

I for one am not willing to believe that "she" is insincere. I know there must have been moments when her soul, I know that she gradually estranged her from her family and her friends, but what I do not know is what she knows—the kind of man he was.

You may condemn or praise what you know about a man, but you cannot justly condemn or praise the man himself definitely and finally until the evidence is all in—until you know him as, for instance, as you know yourself. Or should I say, better?

minutes; cool, add the remaining cream and strain through a double cheesecloth; freeze.

Eggplant Stuffed With Tomatoes
Halve the eggplant and remove the inside. Make a forcemeat of the eggplant pulp, a cupful of chopped ripe tomatoes, one chopped green pepper and a cupful of bread crumbs. Season with a tablespoonful of melted butter and salt and pepper. Fill the hollow sides with this mixture, bind the two halves together with wide tape and bake, basting frequently with melted butter and hot water. When tender, transfer to a hot platter, cut and remove the tape and pour hot tomato sauce about the eggplant.

BRIGHT HUED COATS FOR SPRING STYLE

Smart Spring Styles Described by Margaret Mason—Flounces and Frits in Profusion.

New York, Feb. 27.—Baskies it is and coming as they do fight on top of bustles the female "figger" is in for a complete overhauling and readjustment.

The debutante slouchers will once more lead an upright life and healthful interiors will again be compatible with fashionable outside. It is a far cry from the loose bagginess of the kimono waist to the snug clasp of the regenerated basque, but the bitter fact is known too well to all those dandies who have helped to make a garment do for two seasons that fashion changes at every stride.

Another evidence of this is seen in the new ripple coats whose flaring skirts are indeed a direct antithesis to the coat which held in so tightly about your knees this winter.

All the smartest spring top coats of cloth or silk are shown with a ripple flare set on around the bottom, while others hang loose from the shoulders, widening out gradually toward the hem. Particularly in the sport coats the bright shades of red, green, blue, and yellow will be seen, while among the little fussy short silk coats gay harlequin checks, Scotch plaids and Roman stripes will predominate. Perhaps the most popular uses for the lovely Roman silks will be as sashes but as a trimming and also as whole bodies they are very smart.

The new sash suit is a charming model for the many lovely new figured silks. It is cut like a regulation waist at the top but the two fronts of the waist are crossed over below the V shaped front opening and gradually narrowing to the hem. The ends, they pass around and tie in a bow at the back.

Lovely ladies may now pocket everything, including their pride, for the pocket is in evidence in every chic spring skirt. Just where they are located is a question of little moment in either or both hips of a peg top skirt. A rear one nestling in the shadow of the bustle or a front one just below the belt. Frivoliety is bound to be crazy about this new style. He sees at last where he will have his better half on the hip as "twere and has blissful visions of extensive researches through widely scattered notes. But be that as it may, one thing is sure—if you are out-of-pocket you are out of fashion.

The simple lines of the erstwhile lingerie frock are lost to view. Flounces and draperies that vie with the more pretentious silken gowns. With foundations of soft and clinging net, they are veiled in the film of lace, lace and lace. Frivoliety is bound to be crazy about this new style. He sees at last where he will have his better half on the hip as "twere and has blissful visions of extensive researches through widely scattered notes. But be that as it may, one thing is sure—if you are out-of-pocket you are out of fashion.

Exquisite sheer muslin embroidered with delicate pastel tints are lovely also for the newest lingerie effects, and chiffon embroidered in tinted border designs competes with lace in luring loveliness.

Jet as a garniture of spring hats is being seen on the best of heads. Combined with the upstanding tulle ruffles it is decidedly effective, particularly when it is ornamented with the straight, collar-like band that forms the basis of the crownless chapeau. In lieu of the barred algrette and Paradise some ingenious modistes have evolved imitations out of jet, but the results have proved formulae stiff and brittle. If your hair rippled and waves however, you should by all means get a jetty headpiece.

As a confession to the omnipresent tango, skirts promise to broaden out a bit about the feet. And yet this is only a promise, however, and it has the threat of Paul Poiret to back against.

He, it seems, huris defiance at Terry's and announces that all his skirt designs are tighter and more clinging than heretofore. It is bound to be an exciting struggle and until either Monsieur Poiret or the tango wins out our skirts are doomed to do a sort of hesitation, it seems. It is interesting to note that the one and only Paul also bans the bustle.

Women Worth While

MADAME GROUTCH.

(By Selene Armstrong Harmon.)

Not long since, when the plucky Little Balkan states were in the throes of war, a woman with a gift of fluent speech and with all her heart on the tip of her tongue, hurried across seas to America. She held some conference with Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross society of the Balkan states. And, as ways, if there was an audience of even three or four men and women, she told about these states and their people with an eloquence that brought them close to her hearers, who found themselves positively yearning to give money to her cause.

Many a gentle reader has guessed by now, perhaps, that this little woman with the gift of speech was Madame Grouitch. She is one of those American women who, while residing abroad, is constantly rendering a patriotic service to her native land by her loyalty to and enthusiasm for all things American.

"When she marries out of her native country," Madame Grouitch often says, "a woman does not expatriate herself. She merely goes out into the world to take up an American's work abroad."

Before her marriage, Madame Grouitch was Miss Mabel Gordon Dunlap of West Virginia. Her husband, Slavko Grouitch, has been for a number of years in the diplomatic service of Persia, and only recently was recalled from England to fill an important government position at Belgrade.

The enthusiasm which Madame Grouitch feels for her native country has greatly endeared her to its people. Her speedy action in raising funds with which the Red Cross could alleviate the suffering of Balkan soldiers has made of her a popular heroine in the Balkan states.

It is a recognized fact that Madame Grouitch's personal popularity at the Court of St. James has been of great assistance to her husband and indirectly of value to Serbia. The announcement that she and her husband would soon leave England for Belgrade was followed by a round of entertaining among London's diplomatic corps in their honor. Among these functions was a luncheon given in honor of Madame Grouitch by American society women residing in London. Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Page, Sir Gilbert and Lady Parker, the Norwegian minister and his wife and the Japanese ambassador and his wife were among many well known people who attended.

Madame Grouitch is a woman of broad culture. She has traveled all over the world and is a cosmopolitan in the true sense of the word. She attributes much of her success in foreign lands to the careful training she received as a child at her West Virginia home and still recalls how, when as a little girl she listened from pure English into colloquial dialect sometimes, her father invariably sent her to clean her teeth and wash away the contamination of inelegant words.

EVERYDAY TALKS FOR EVERYDAY PEOPLE

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

It's business terms that appeal to us nowadays. Instead of a married woman hating herself as a wife or hating her husband as a husband, she is the junior partner or the vice president of the firm.

Do we live up to the titles we give ourselves; do we conscientiously endeavor to make a good partner; a satisfactory vice president? Do we spend our days in our husbands' absence working with and for him, as he does for us. Are we making out of our home a good, sound financial institution as well as a haven from outside toil, care and worry?

This day if we employed the methods in an office that we do in our homes, would we be kept for our efficiency? Are we alert, progressive, capable, or is the important work of home-maker too big for the average woman?

If it is we are not running our homes systematically and staying inside our incomes, no matter how small that income is. Take this in the sense it is written in. If you cannot stay inside your husband's income when he is working steady, when you have so much coming in each payday, what are you going to do when you are not the possessor of a steady income? The average woman has not discovered the waters of youth. He is going up against what lies ahead of every man—a time when he can no longer rank as an earner. What then?

"Oh! Some people do enjoy drawing gloomy pictures," you say. Well here's hoping the picture will never step from its frame for any of our readers, but a reserved and about as safe as a friend as one can find. Have you one?

When a man is told that he is "too big for his job," it is complimentary. On the other hand, when he is told that his job is too big for him it sets him seriously thinking. He realizes that if he don't readjust his ways he may lose out. The same applies to women. If we do not put in the time and plan on the running of our homes, we may lose out. Not in one sense, for marriage is for life; we need not fear that the vice president will not be re-elected, but just because we are sure of our position is all the more reason that we should try and work up in our line.

It is not fair to John for us to rest on our laurels. If we do we are apt to have them very long. Marriage is team work; if one does all the pulling you don't get half as far as if you both get into the harness, and pulled together. There is plenty of work for both man and woman in married life. I'll wager some of my readers will say there is enough and to spare.

Have we a right to the business terms that we apply to ourselves? Yes! If we are good partners, efficient managers and competent to satisfactorily fill the position of home-maker. Do you think you are in line for re-election?

Tooth Talks

People that say that they do not have time to clean their teeth are in the same line of thought as a miser that sees nothing but the glitter of his gold pieces. They place the dollar above their own bodily interest. This is a narrow-minded way to look at it and generally shows a lack of education. Who will dispute that placing the dollar above personal cleanliness is anything but a heathenish idea? Mouth hygiene is the most essential part of body hygiene. The mouth is the gateway of life and through it passes all our nourishment. Can any hygiene be of more importance than that which prevents our food becoming contaminated with the filth contained in an unkept mouth? Children are always being told that if they eat a lot of candy that their teeth will all rot out. There is not any acid in candy; why should it destroy the teeth? There is only one answer to this question: If the teeth are allowed to be left coated with candy or any food containing sugar, fermentation will soon take place and then we have an acid to destroy the line formation of our teeth. On the other hand, had the mouth and teeth been cleansed shortly after eating candies or other foods, this fermentation would not have taken place. Would it not be quite profitable for parents to teach their children to keep their mouths clean to prevent destruction of their teeth and the troublesome conditions that follow? How often we hear the remark that teeth in America are not the same as teeth years ago or as they are in the old country. Those that

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

If a glass is desired on linen add a teaspoonful of salt to the starch when making.

Soup that is allowed to dry and heat lasts twice as long as if used when fresh. Therefore it is cheaper to buy in quantities and keep it in a dry place.

White velvet can be freshened by applying chloroform to it after freeing it of dust.

When shoe polish becomes dry from keeping it too long, moisten it with a little turpentine. Rub the polish and it is usable once more. It also gives a good gloss to the leather.

THE TABLE.

Chocolate Vienna Cake—Three-quarters cup of butter, seven-eighths cup of sugar, yolks of five eggs, four squares of baker's chocolate, one and one-half cups of flour, three tea-spoonsful of baking powder, whites of five eggs, apricot or orange marmalade. Mix the ingredients in the order given and bake in sugar loaf pan. Remove from the fire, cool, take out a small portion of the cake from the center of each and fill the cavity with marmalade. Cover the tops of the cake with marshallow frosting or chocolate frosting.

Griddle Cakes—Three cups of flour, one and one-half tea-spoonsful of baking powder, one tea-spoonsful of salt, one-quarter cup of sugar, two cups of milk, one egg, two table-spoonsful of melted butter. Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Beat the egg and the milk and pour heavily on the first mixture. Beat thoroughly, and add the butter. Drop by the spoonful on a greased hot griddle; cook on both sides and cook puffed the edges, turn and cook on the other side. Serve with butter and maple syrup.

Candied Pineapple—Peel, slice and weigh the pineapple, and allow a pound of sugar to each pound of fruit. Put the fruit and the sugar together in a granite kettle and add just what water to cover the fruit. Boil until the fruit is tender, remove and spread on a dish to cool while you boil the syrup until it is very thick. Now lay in the pineapple, cook and stir for five minutes more, and then thread the sliced fruit on platters until dry and candied.

Coffee Ice Cream—One quart of cream, one and one-half cups of milk, one-third cup of Alchola coffee, one and one-quarter cups of sugar, one-quarter tea-spoonsful of salt, yolks of four eggs. Scald the milk with the coffee, add one cup of sugar, mix the egg yolks slightly beaten with one-fourth cup of sugar, and salt; combine the mixtures, cook over hot water until thickened, add one cup of cream and let stand on the back of the range twenty-five

The Secret of Beauty—FREE

A Masterpiece in color by C. Allen Gilbert the well known artist

We will send to all users of GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM, a copy of Mr. Gilbert's beautiful painting entitled "The Secret of Beauty." In pastel form, it is a splendid reproduction on highly coated paper of one of the girl's figures Mr. Gilbert is noted for and is not marked by any printed matter which would mar the picture. We are confident you will be highly pleased with the picture and calendar and find it a valued addition to your library or den.

Hurried and careless habits of eating, irregular meals and foods that do not harmonize, tend to weaken the digestive organs and result in different forms of stomach trouble.

If you are one of the unfortunate who have drifted into this condition, eat simple foods only, slowly, regularly and take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic.

Mrs. H. J. Smith, Thomasville, Ga., says: "I suffered from a stomach trouble, was tired, worn out and nervous. A friend advised me to take Vinol. My stomach trouble soon disappeared and now I eat heartily and have a perfect digestion and I wish every tired, weak woman could have Vinol, for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good." The recovery of Mrs. Smith was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements of the cod's livers—aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol. We will return the purchase money every time Vinol fails to cure. Smith, Drug Co., Druggists, Jacksonville, Fla.

Had Serious Lung Trouble—Now Well

Sufferers from Lung Trouble are often misled in the belief that nothing will save them. Rest, fresh air, wholesome food and regular habits do much in aiding to restore health, but something else is needed. Many people who have taken Eckman's Asthma, Stomach and Lung Remedy have testified that it was this medicine which restored them to health.

"Gentlemen: Through your instrumentality I have been saved from a premature grave. On December 1, 1905, I was taken with Typhoid Pneumonia, which developed into Lung Trouble. In February, 1906, I went to Fort Worth, Texas, and later to Canon City, Colorado. After being there two weeks my physician informed me that my case was hopeless. Three weeks later I returned home, weighing 103 pounds, the doctor having given me no assurance of reaching there alive. On July 14, 1905, I began taking Eckman's wonderful remedy for Lung Trouble. Today I weigh 138 pounds. I am stout and well and can do any kind of work about my grain elevator. (Address) Above abbreviated; more on request.) Eckman's Asthma and Lung Remedy has been tested to be most efficacious in Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stomach and in rebuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Ask for Eckman's Asthma, Stomach and Lung Remedy, for evidence. For sale by all leading druggists and Smith Drug Co., McCue and Buss, Peoples' Drug Co., in Janesville.

The Hollow of Her Hand

By GEORGE BARR MCCUTCHEON

Author of "Crusade," "The Road to Rome," etc.

She was perfectly still for a long time, so still that she did not appear to be breathing. Her eyes grew darker, more mysterious. If he had taken the pains to notice, he would have seen that her fingers were rigid.

"I am pleased," she said, very gently.

She could have shrieked the words. How she hated all these smug Wrandralls!

"I came to the decision yesterday," he went on, tapping the arm of the chair with his finger tips, as if timing his words with care and precision.

"Spoke to dad about it at lunch. I was coming out on the fire o'clock, as I'd planned, but he seemed to think I'd better talk it over with the mater first. Not that she would be likely to kick up a row, you know, but—well, for policy's sake. See what I mean? Decent thing to do, you know."

"Never quite got over the way you and Chal stole a march on her. God knows I'm not like Chal."

Her eyes narrowed again. "No," she said, "you are not like your brother."

"Chal was all right, mind you, in what he did," he added hastily, noting the look. "I would do the same, 'pon my soul I would, if there were any senseless objections raised in my case. But, of course, it was right for me to talk it over with her, just the same. So I stayed in and gave them all the chance to say what they thought of me—said, incidentally, don't you think? A fellow's mother is his mother, after all. See what I mean?"

"She is quite satisfied, then, that you are not throwing yourself away on Miss Castleton?" said Sara, with a deep breath, which he mistook for a sigh.

"Oh, trust mother to nose into things. She knows Miss Castleton's pedigree from the ground up. There's Debrett, you see. What's more, you can't fool her in a pinch. She knows blood when she sees it. Father hasn't the same sense of proportion, however. He says you never can tell."

Sara was startled. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, it's nothing to speak of; only a way he has of grinding mother once in a while. He uses you as an example to prove that you never can tell, and mother has to admit that he's right. You have upset every one of her pet theories. She sees it now, but—when! She couldn't see it in the old days, could she?"

"I fear not," said she in a low voice. Her eyes smoldered. "It is quite natural that she should not want you to make the mistake your brother made."

"Oh, please don't put it that way, Sara. You make me feel like a half-baked confounded prig, because that's what it comes to, with them, don't you know, and yet my attitude has always been clear to them where you're concerned. I was strong for you from the beginning. All that silly rot about—"

"Please, please!" she burst out, quivering all over.

"I beg your pardon, he stammered. "You—you know how I mean it, dear girl."

"Please leave me out of it, Leslie," she said, collecting herself. After a moment she went on calmly: "And so you are going to marry my poor little Hetty, and they are all pleased with the arrangement."

"If she'll have me," he said with a wink, as if to say there wasn't any use doubting it. "They're tickled to death."

"Vivian?"

"Vivian's a snob. She says Hetty's much too good for me, blood and bone. What business, says she, has a Wrandrall aspiring to the descendant of Henry the Eighth?"

"What?"

"The Murgatroyds go back to old Henry, straight as a plummet. 'Gad, what Vivvy doesn't know about British aristocracy isn't worth knowing. She looked it up the time they tried to convince her she ought to marry the duke. But she's fond of Hetty. She says she's a darling. She's right: Hetty is too good for me."

Sara swished her gown about and rose gracefully from the chaise-longue. Extending her hand to him she said, and he was never to forget the deep thrill in her voice:

"Well, I wish you good luck, Leslie. Don't take no for an answer."

"Lord, if she should say no," he rasped, confronted by the possibility of such stupidity on Hetty's part. "You don't think she will?"

Her answer was a smile of doubt, the effect of which was to destroy his tranquility for hours.

"It is time for luncheon. I suppose we'll have to interrupt them. Perhaps it is just as well, for your sake," she said tauntingly.

He grinned, but it was a sickly effort.

"You're the one to spoil anything of that sort," he said, with some asperity.

"I?"

"Certainly," he said with so much meaning in the word that she flushed. Hetty and Booth came into view at that instant. The painter was laying a soft, filmy scarf over the girl's bare shoulders as he followed close behind her.

"Hello!" he cried, catching sight of Wrandrall. "Train late, old chap? We've been expecting you for the last hour. How are you?"

He came up with a frank, genuine smile of pleasure on his lips, his hand extended. Leslie rose to the occasion. His self-esteem was larger than his grievance. He shook Booth's hand heartily, almost exuberantly.

"Didn't want to disturb you, Brandy," he cried, cheerily. "Besides, Sara wouldn't let me." He then passed on to Hetty, who had lagged behind. Bending low over her hand, he said something commonplace in a very low tone, at the same time looking slyly out of the corner of his eye to see if Booth was taking it all in. Finding that his friend was regarding him rather fixedly, he obeyed a sudden impulse and raised the girl's slim hand to his lips. As suddenly he released her fingers and straightened up with a look of surprise in his eyes; he had distinctly heard the agitated catch in her throat. She was staring at her hand in a stupefied sort of way, holding it rigid before her eyes for a moment before thrusting it behind her back as if it were a thing to be shielded from all scrutiny save her own.

"You must not kiss it again, Mr. Wrandrall," she said in a low, intense voice. Then she passed him by and hurried up the stairs, without so much as a glance over her shoulder.

He blinked in astonishment. All of a sudden there swept over him the unique sensation of eyness—most unique in him. He had never been ashamed before in all his life. Now he was curiously conscious of having overstepped the bounds, and for the first time to be shown his place by a girl. This to him, who had no scruples about boundary lines.

All through luncheon he was volatile and gay. There was a bright spot in his cheek, however, that betrayed the temper of his thoughts. He talked aeroplaning without cessation, directing most of his conversation to Booth, yet thrilled with pleasure each time Hetty laughed at his sallies. He was beginning to feel like a half-baked schoolboy in her presence, a most deplorable state of affairs he had to admit.

"If you hate the trains so much, and your automobile is out of whack, why don't you try volplaning down from the Metropolitan tower?" demanded Booth in response to his lugubrious wall against the beastly luck of having to go about in railway coaches with a lot of red-eyed, nose-blowing people who hadn't got used to their spring underwear yet.

"Sinister suggestion, I must say," he exclaimed. "You must be eager to see my life blood scattered all over creation. But, speaking of volplaning, I've had three lessons this week. Next week Bronson says I'll be flying like a gull. 'Gad, it's wonderful. I've had two tumbles, that's all—little ones, of course—net result a barked knee and a peeled elbow."

"Watch out, you're not flying like an angel before you get through with it, Les," cautioned the painter. "I see that a well-known society leader in Chicago was killed yesterday."

"Oh, I love the danger there is in it," said Wrandrall carelessly. "That's what gives zest to the sport."

"I love it, too," said Hetty, her eyes agleam. "The glorious feel of the wind as you rush through it! And yet one seems to be standing perfectly still in the air when one is half a mile high and going fifty miles an hour. Oh, it is wonderful, Mr. Wrandrall!"

"I'll take you out in a week or two, Miss Castleton, if you'll trust yourself with me."

"Will go," she announced promptly. Booth frowned. "Better wait a bit," he counseled. "Risky business, Miss Castleton, flying about with fledglings."

"Oh, come now!" expostulated Wrandrall with some heat. "Don't be a wet blanket, old man."

"I was merely suggesting she'd better wait till you've got used to your wings."

"Jimmy Van Winkle took his wife with him the third time up," said Leslie, as if that were the last word in aeroplaning.

"It's common report that she keeps Jimmy level, no matter where she's got him," retorted Booth.

"I dare say Miss Castleton can hold me level," said Leslie, with a profound bow to her. "Can't you, Miss Castleton?"

She smiled. "Oh, as for that, Mr. Wrandrall, I think we can all trust you to cling pretty closely to your own level."

"Rather ambiguous, that," he remarked dubiously.

"She means you never get below it, Leslie," said Booth, enjoying himself.

"That's the one great principle in aeroplaning," said Wrandrall, quick to recover. "Vivian says I'll break my neck some day, but admits it will be a heroic way of doing it. Much nobler than pitching out of an automobile or catapulting over a horse's head in Central park." He paused for effect before venturing his next conclusion. "It must be infinitely sublime, being squashed—or is it squashed?—after a drop of a mile or so, isn't it?"

He looked to see Miss Castleton, vince, and was somewhat dashed to find that she was looking out of the window, quite oblivious to the peril he was in figuratively for her special consideration.

Booth was acutely reminded that the term "prig" as applied to Leslie was a misnomer; he hated the thought of the other word, which reflectively he rhymed with "pad."

It occurred to him early in the course of this one-sided discussion that the hostess was making no effort to take part in it, whether from lack of interest or because of its frivolous nature he was, of course, unable to determine. Later, he was struck by the curious pallor of her face, and the lack-luster expression of her eyes. She seldom removed her gaze from Wrandrall's face, and yet there persisted in the observer's mind the rather uncanny impression that she did not hear a word her brother-in-law was saying. He, in turn, took to watching her covertly. At no time did her expression change.

For reasons of his own, he did not attempt to draw her into the conversation, fascinated as he was by the study of that beautiful, emotionless face. Once he had the queer sensation of feeling, rather than seeing, a haunted look in her eyes, but he put it down to fancy on his part.

And Leslie babbled on in blissful ignorance of, not to say disregard for, this strange ghost at the feast, for, to Booth's mind, the ghost of Challis Wrandrall was there.

Turning to Miss Castleton with a significant look in his eyes, meant to call her attention to Mrs. Wrandrall, he was amazed to find that every vestige of color had gone from the girl's face. She was listening to Wrandrall and replying in monosyllables, but that she was aware of the other woman's abstraction was not for an instant to be doubted. Suddenly, after a quick glance at Sara's face, she looked squarely into Booth's eyes, and he saw in hers an expression of actual concern, if not alarm.

ABE MARTIN

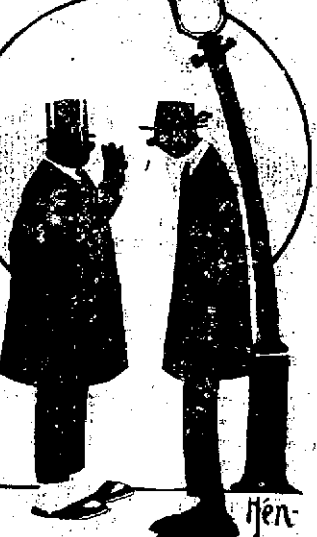

The reason some folks don't understand the income tax is because they don't want to. Lem Anley, who passed away yesterday with nicotine on his heart, left a wife, seven children and one thousand three hundred and fifty-three coupons.

AND HE DID

OH-HAROLD-THERE ARE TWO POLICEMEN CALLING ON THE COOK AND THEY WANT GO. I REALLY WISH YOU WOULD SPEAK TO THEM.

AND HE DID

WORRIED.

"Well, well, so your wife has left you? Cheer up! May be she will come back."
